Rep. Xavier Becerra (D-CA) went head-to-head with Neil Cavuto on gas prices. He said, “We’ve known the price of gas has been going up for quite some time, but it’s the rapid increase in the price of gas that’s got everybody worried. And we experienced this four year, five years ago in 2008.”

He went on to say that the demand for fuel is lower today than it was a few years ago, but the supply is greater. Becerra blamed speculators for driving up the costs in the past few weeks, uncertainty in the Middle East, and OPEC using its “monopoly” to control prices.
